UK Outlook for Saturday 5 Jun 2021 to Monday 14 Jun 2021:
Rather mixed conditions expected at the start of the period, with a good deal of fine weather around, although equally cloud and outbreaks of rain tending to gradually work its way in from the west. There also remains a risk of thunderstorms, especially in the far east and south-east, accompanied by very warm or hot conditions. Otherwise, temperatures will trend towards nearer the seasonal average, warm in the sunnier spots. Into the following week, a trend towards more settled and dry conditions overall, however this accompanied by a risk of some showers and longer spells of light rain. There is an increasing chance of more unsettled conditions with wind and rain for north-western areas possible by the end of the period.
